SACS committee comes to town to re-evaluate JSU

“If you are sitting in the (cafeteria) on Tuesday or Wednesday, do not be surprised if (a committee member) walks right in and sits down and says, ‘May I chat with you?’”

A committee visiting JSU next week may determine the course of the University's future.

Fifteen representatives of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools will be on campus Monday through Thursday talking to students, faculty and staff and reviewing the institutional self-study.

The committee will use the information they gather next week in their recommendation to the association concerning JSU's re-accreditation.

The review could have a great impact on students' futures.

“It gives your degree a certain amount of worth,” said University President Harold J. McGee.

If the University were not accredited, students would not be eligible for financial aid. It is nearly impossible to get into a graduate or professional school without a degree from an accredited university.

A degree from an accredited university is also a requirement for licensing in such fields as nursing and accounting.

Public school teachers in Alabama must have a degree from an accredited university. Professional accreditation for the individual colleges also depends on whether or not the university itself is accredited.

While at JSU, committee members will gather their information through contact with the people they see on campus as well as through reviewing the University self-study.

William D. Carr, director of Institutional Self-Study, said representatives of all student groups will have an opportunity to meet with various members, including students in off-campus classes and night classes.

According to Carr, most of the interviews will be spontaneous. “If you are sitting in the student dining room on Tuesday or Wednesday, do not be surprised if (a committee member) walks right in and sits but some weren't so sure. “I think the University puts too much emphasis on athletics and not enough on academics... Higher tuition for less classes offered is not a good equation either,” said one student.

The committee will spend much of its time with the steering committee of the Institutional Self-Study. Carr and his co-workers have spent the past two years reviewing every aspect of the University, including admission requirements, library services and faculty hiring procedures. The work of those committees form the bulk of the 520-page Self-Study Report.

Changes planned for campus bookstore

Dyana Blythe
News Editor

The Bookstore Committee met with representatives with Follett Corporation last week to discuss problems that have surfaced about bookstore practices.

According to Scott Brannon, a member of the Bookstore Committee, the bookstore has agreed to lower its prices. Employees of the bookstore did their own investigation into price differences between their store and the Jacksonville Bookstore on the square and discovered they did have significantly higher prices.

In fact, the bookstore will now offer a lower price guarantee. If a student buys a book from Follett and then finds the book cheaper on the square, Follett will match the price by returning money paid in excess.

They also agreed to start buying books back at half the original price, but only during the "big buy" time -- the time during finals when many students are selling their old books and buying new ones. The half price promise does not go into effect until finals have begun. Many students had complained at the end of last semester that the bookstore was only buying their books back at a fraction of what they originally paid.

Another item discussed by the committee was the problem some students have had getting checks accepted at the bookstore, although Brannon did not say if they have devised any solutions to they problem yet.

The bookstore did admit to supplying only a portion of books for each class because it knows most students will buy their books on the square. They supply around 30 percent of the books, but agreed to supply more books for classes having only 25 or fewer students enrolled in the class.

The committee plans to meet again in early April in order to decide on exactly how to put the new policies into effect.

Lack of interest results in SGA appointing senate, no elections

Dyana Blythe
News Editor

The SGA will not hold senate elections this year because there were not enough applications turned in to make up an entire senate.

Currently 35 students sit on the SGA senate. This number was reduced from 50 two years ago because there were not enough students applying for the positions.

According to Jeff Bennett, SGA Elections chair, only 19 students turned in applications for senator for the 1993-94 academic year. These students fulfilled the requirements of turning the application in by Feb. 24 and attending a mandatory meeting last Thursday of all senator and officer candidates.

Bennett believes that because these 19 students showed responsibility in these areas, they have proven their competence to become senators. Therefore, students will not be voting this year; the qualified applicants have already become senators.

If any more students are interested in becoming senators, the SGA will set another deadline, said Bennett. Then, when the new senate composed of the first 19 students meets for the first time in mid-April, it will be up to them to appoint all other applicants to the senate.

However, elections will be held for officers. The candidates for SGA President are Ashley Richards and Chris Dempsey. The only candidate for Vice President is Emory Serviss and the candidate for Financial Officer is Shelley Arnold.

Students do have the option of writing in votes.

Elections for SGA officers will be held March 9. The booth will open at 9 am and close at 5 pm. Bennett said the Elections Committee decided to keep the booth open later so that student workers could come and vote without having to leave work. Specifically, the education department asked for more accessible voting hours.

Report: Give all students $14,000 in financial aid

Jeff Goldfarb
Washington Correspondent
College Press Service

All full-time undergraduate college students should be eligible to receive $14,000 in federal aid through a combination of grants and loans, according to a congressional study on how to make college affordable for more Americans.

While "Making College Affordable Again" suggests that the amount of funds available to all should be equal, the type of aid should vary according to financial need and tuition costs.

The poorest students would receive more grants, and students from richer families would be eligible for unsubsidized loans, where interest accrues throughout the life of the loan, including the time the student is in school, the proposal said.

The report, the result of two years' study by the National Commission on Responsibilities for Financing Postsecondary Education, calls its recommendation STEP, or the Student's Total Education Package. It suggests that STEP would streamline the current federal financial aid system.

Under the STEP recommendation, each student would be eligible for about $14,000. The program assumes a maximum federal grant of $4,000 and a combined maximum work-study and federally subsidized loan award of $10,000.

The federal loan system should cut its bureaucracy and provide "user-friendly" repayment options for students, the report recommends. It also supports President Clinton's community service option by suggesting that 20 percent of loan principal be forgiven for every year of service, with a maximum of three years of service available.

"Many college students today graduate with debts that exceed their family's home mortgage payments," said Daniel Cheever Jr., president of the American Student Assistance, one of the country's biggest federal student guaranty agencies.

Cheever praised the study, saying, "The commission's report forcefully and creatively tackles one of the major threats to the stability of our nation's higher education system, the affordability crisis."

The report points out that in the 1980s, the cost of attending college skyrocketed 126 percent, twice the rate of inflation for the decade. In fact, the cost of going to college increased even more than the cost of health care during the decade, the report said.

"The most productive step the federal government can take in strengthening the postsecondary education financing partnership is to lead by example," the report's authors wrote.

The Education Finance Council, a non-profit member association of state student loan secondary market organizations, applauded the commission's efforts, but offered a few criticisms, as well.

"The report fails to emphasize the dramatic improvements delivered to students in last year's reauthorization of the Higher Education Act," the council said.

The council also chided the report's direct lending concept because the administrative costs of such a project "will be transferred to colleges and universities and create upward pressure on tuition while reducing a student's financial options at the same time."

The report estimates its proposals would cost around $7 billion in the first year of implementation. The Education Finance Council said it was "unrealistic" to expect the government to put up such funding.

More hiring, less recruiting on university campuses

College Press Service

Although employers are expecting to hire more college graduates this year, recruiting efforts on campuses are expected to be lower than in previous years, a study by the College Placement Council found.

"Students will have to be more flexible in the types of positions they want to take," said Dawn Oberman, a statistical services specialist with the College Placement Council.

"Many came into school four years ago in hopes of landing a job with a major corporation in a particular area of the country. They will have to be willing to relocate, perhaps work for a smaller employer and not expect high salaries."

In the survey, 316 employers said they plan to hire more graduates this year than they did in 1992. Overall, the firms said they project hiring 7.7 percent more graduates than they did in 1992.

Services employers were planning to increase hiring by 12.5 percent, and manufacturing employers were projecting a 5.4 percent increase. Government and non-profit organizations, however, were decreasing their college hires by 18.4 percent because of hiring freezes and downsizing.

Oberman said because of travel costs and recruiting cutbacks, employers were planning to cut back both recruiting efforts and visits to college and university campuses this spring.

Nearly 40 percent of the employers are decreasing the number of campuses they will visit 11.3 percent fewer campuses in the 1992-93 recruiting season than they did last year. They will visit an average of 23 campuses this year, compared with an average of 26 campuses last year.

Firms can be picky in their hiring this year, the report said. "The 1991-92 job market for new college graduates was a buyer's market — and 1992-93 promises to be more of the same," the report said.

Part of the reason is that with many companies restructuring and eliminating jobs, there are fewer job openings, analysts said.

And depending on the major, there is a glut of certain jobs in the market. Salaries and job availability in health-related fields are still growing, but other areas, such as aerospace engineering and the humanities, are shrinking.

Graduates from nursing programs can expect initial salary offers to rise 7.2 percent to $31,732. Allied health graduates also gained, posting a 3.8 percent increase for an average of $30,555.

Starting salary offers to electrical and mechanical engineers increased only slightly (1.7 percent and 1.4 percent respectively) because there is a surplus of these graduates.

The percentage of job offers to aerospace engineers reported to the College Placement Council has fallen. In 1989-90, aerospace represented 4.2 percent of all engineering jobs offered, and it has fallen to an estimated 1.6 percent this year.

The situation remains about the same for humanities and social sciences graduates: salaries are remaining flat and are lower.

Starting salary offers for humanities graduates were expected to be 2.7 percent lower than last year, for an average of $22,941. Social sciences graduates saw their initial salary offers rise slightly to an average of $21,623.

Business students work on Wall Street

Sherry Fraser News Writer

Twenty-seven JSU students are receiving practical experience on Wall Street by competing in the AT&T Collegiate Investment Challenge.

Students from across campus, but mainly in the Financial Management Association are competing in the challenge to gain experience in the stock market without risking money that they cannot afford. According to Gene Padgham, sponsor of the FMA, "Everything is real except the money. You start out with a fictional $500,000 account that you have to invest in about 5,000 different stocks."

Holly Downard, FMA secretary, describes the contest as a hands-on experience. "You get to buy, sell and trade stocks. Then you get a 1-800 number to call. They ask for your account number and how (the brokers) can help you. I would order 100 shares of stock in Wal-Mart or whatever. The order gets put in your portfolio and that's it. Once a month you get a statement to show you how well your portfolio has been doing."

The last day of the challenge is Friday. JSU students competed in the last three years with increasing interest. Padgham attributes the rising number of JSU participants to a cash award made through the dean of the College of Business.

"The award was used to help defray the entry fees so that the students didn't have to come up with the full $49.95," Padgham said. With this financial aid, the cost was lowered to about $30 per student.

Participants compete in high school, college or educator divisions on a national and local scale. National prizes range from new cars and vacations to scholarships and scientific calculators.

Warren Dotson, a senior at JSU, sees the potential gained by practicing in the stock market with fictional money. "The reason I got interested is because I did want to start investing some of my own money. I thought I would practice a little bit and find out about the market, and I did invest some of my own money after I did this for a while," he said.

Other than personal finance, the reason many college students participate in the challenge is for practical business experience.

24 subcommittees and more than 170 faculty, staff and students," Carr said.

The purpose of the report and the review committee is to guide the University toward improving its programs and to guide the Commission on Colleges in its decision whether or not to reaffirm accreditation.

Originally, the report contained 125 recommendations and suggestions. In the terms of accreditation, recommendations must be met while suggestions should be met.

The final version of the report contains only 75 of these. Carr said the University fulfilled most of the 50 requirements left. Others were eliminated because the needs had been met before the report was published. Both McGee and Carr said they are pleased with the self-study and feel the review committee will find it to be accurate.

"The steering committee has just done an outstanding job putting the self study together," McGee said. "It's a good portrait of an institution that has done very, very well in difficult times."

McGee said the University has had difficulty meeting some of the requirements due to a lack of funds, but he said the University is looking towards other sources of funding outside of the government to achieve all of the goals set forth in the report.

The University has been accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools since 1935. The association reviews schools every 10 years in order to reaffirm accreditation.

Let the real JSU stand up

Next week, Jacksonville State University will be host to some very important people.

The Visiting Committee on school accreditation comes to town Monday morning, and JSU is definitely rolling out the red carpet.

The purpose of the committee's visit, in the most basic of terms, is to examine the state of the campus and decide if JSU is worthy of continued accreditation. VIPs indeed.

No accreditation means a bite is taken out of government funding. While the university obviously has its problems, it would take a lot for the school to lose its accreditation.

But that has not stopped a push for an overall positive view of JSU. There's nothing wrong in purveying a good atmosphere, but campaigning for positive feedback is a bit much.

Various students have been asked, or advised, to respond positively if approached by a committee member next week and asked questions about JSU. That's ridiculous.

There are enough happy, content students on campus without lobbying others. And if a student is dissatisfied, that student should let it be known.

Just how much student interaction there will be is not really known.

The students, however are not the biggest concern. Faculty members had to work on departmental self-studies on JSU last year. It seems the purpose of a self-study would be to see if there are any problems and if so, what to do about them.

However, at least one faculty member was told his self-study was too negative. It was re-written. That doesn't appear to be the way to improve problems within the system.

When the Visiting Committee makes it to campus next week, they will be reviewing many different aspects of JSU. They will also be lodged and fed five of their meals in the Victoria and treated to a banquet the night of their arrival.

Two days the committee will be eating lunch at the cafeteria. And aren't the suites in Patterson Hall there for visitors?

What's good for us should be good for our visitors next week. After all, that's the point of their coming here, isn't it? To see how the students are benefitting?

So why the sugar-coating? Let's take the bad with the good.

Maybe reports of silver-engraved serving trays especially for the reception are not true.

The president's MacPolitics

Don't stop thinkin' about tomorrow/Don't stop it'll soon be here/It'll be better than before/Yesterday's gone/Yesterday's gone
--"Don't Stop"

During the 1992 presidential race, it became hip to have a campaign theme song. Even those who did not vote for Bill Clinton must admit he picked a good one.

How inspirational to hear the up tempo Fleetwood Mac song playing underneath a cheering crowd.

But now, Clinton's self-proclaimed theme song doesn't seem as inspirational. The president seems to have taken the words "yesterday's gone" to heart.

During his campaign of hope and promise, Clinton talked, or rather preached, of a needed change in government. Along the way, he promised to relieve the middle class of the tax burden it was having to bear. He promised relief to Haitian refugees kept out of America by the Bush administration. He warned of cuts in defense spending but showed support for Freedom, the on-the-drawing board space station.

Yes, Mr. President, yesterday's gone.

Perhaps he picked the wrong Fleetwood Mac song.

Have you any dreams you'd like to sell?

--"Dreams"

Clinton reversed his policy on the refugees before he even took office. He is considering an approximately 40 percent cut in funding for the space station, although Al Gore says the administration is firmly behind Freedom. And in his recent address to Congress, Clinton completed his turn by hitting the middle class with a part of one of the biggest possible tax increases in history.

JASON THOMPSON
EDITOR IN CHIEF

Oops. That should read revenue increase. Or contribution. Patriotic contribution, that is.

It can't be denied a major overhaul is needed right now. Everyone admits some things have to change. But what's going on?

Voters in last year's election can be divided into three groups: (1) those who believed Clinton and voted for him (2) those who did not really believe Clinton but voted for him anyway (3) those who did not believe Clinton and did not vote for him.

Two out of three ain't bad. Clinton and his team ran a brilliant campaign but stumbled in the transition process once elected.

The man who prided himself on being a crack economist just didn't realize how large the deficit was? Did he and his staff look in the Congressional Budget Office? His staff says Clinton was lied to about the real figures. It's a good thing the real figures on the deficit were found so quickly after being elected.

He promised a fairer government but painted himself into a special interest corner when choosing his Cabinet. So there's not a man in America qualified to be Attorney General? Surely that appointment had nothing to do with his wife being a lawyer.

What if Clinton had admitted to only considering a male? The cries of discrimination can be heard now.

The entire gay in-the-military issue is about the least important issue facing our "decaying America." But he jumped on it first and risked losing support of moderate Democrats before he even got to the relevant issues.

Clinton should be commended, however, for not taking his first few weeks lightly. He is showing an activism in policy-making that Bush never really did. And he pushed immediately for reintroducing the Family Leave Bill which Bush mistakenly vetoed in his last months.

But he should not forget the people who put him in office. Thus far, he has done exactly what Bush did—go back on central campaign promises. And Clinton has done it in only a month.

Perhaps there is yet another Fleetwood Mac that would have been more appropriate for his campaign.

Tell me lies/tell me sweet little lies

--"Little Lies"

You can't do that in public!

I was doing a run-through the cable with my magic clicker recently, and I came upon Oprah Winfrey interviewing Michael Jackson.

What a pair to draw to

The next day the papers said it was Jackson's first live interview in a decade. That's a long time between live interviews, but the rock star had all that money to count.

Oprah dealt with many issues.

She asked Michael Jackson if he did any skin-bleaching.

He said he didn't. (I believe him. I really do.)

She asked him if he's had extensive plastic surgery. He said just a cut, a lift and a stitch here and there.

Then she asked him what all us Michael Jackson watchers out there really wanted to know: She asked him why he often grabbed his crotch while he is dancing and singing in public.

"It happens subliminally," he answered. "It's music that compels me to do it. You don't think about it. It just happens. I'm a slave to the music."

I can certainly understand that. You're singing and dancing along in front of a lot of people and the music says, "Grab your crotch, one-two!"

What are you going to do? Ignore that old slave master, Mr. Rhythm?

Of course Michael Jackson isn't

the only crotch-grabber in the world of notables

Recall that Roseanne Barr, seconds after butchering the national anthem at a baseball game, grabbed her crotch. She said she was mimicking what baseball players do.

Baseball players aren't slaves to the music, so they must grab their crotches for a different reason.

I know what it is. When a baseball player grabs his crotch, he's adjusting, not grabbing.

Madonna sometimes grabs her crotch while she's singing and dancing, too.

Sometimes the police get upset by that, but Madonna does it anyway.

I guess the music makes her do that, too. The Devil used to make people do things like that.

Personally, I'm against crotch-grabbing in public, regardless of the reasons some entertainers say they do it.

It's nasty.

It just is.

What if politicians started grabbing their crotches?

"Senator Doolittle," asks Sam Donaldson, "we noticed that during your address to the National Press Club, you grabbed your crotch a great deal. Can you tell us why?"

"It happens subliminally, Sam, answers the senator. "I'm just a slave to my own voice."

What if crotch-grabbing—since it is practiced by the rich and famous—caught on and everybody went around doing it?

But no matter if crotch-grabbing became a national rage, I'm never going to do it. I try to avoid rages.

I don't wear an earring, I don't refer to everybody else as "dude," and I don't do aerobics.

And I'm not a slave to music. I like music. I like country music most of all, but, so far, I've never heard a country song that made me want to grab my crotch to the beat—not even "Achy Breaky Heart."

And I'm a traditional values sort of guy. I think the parents of children ought to get married before they have babies, men shouldn't wear ear adornments and grabbing one's crotch in public is about as rude as anything one can do.

My mother used to gasp in disbelief when I picked my nose in church.

She'd never have survived me grabbing my crotch.

And isn't that basically the same thing Pee-Wee Herman was doing when he got arrested in the movie house?

At least he had the decency to go inside a dark theater first.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Attendance policy should be kept

Dear Editor,

I have seen and read of the letters printed that most want the attendance policy abolished.

Why?

Carol Morgan wants to be treated like a "...responsible, independent adult." It sounds as though she, and most others, don't understand the meaning of being a responsible, independent adult.

The attendance policy is there for a reason. In Texas, all colleges and state universities have attendance policies. If one in Texas wants to enter a university, i.e. Texas A&M, one must have a 2.0 GPA to enter and retain it to stay in.

I, therefore urge the JSU administration to keep the attendance policy but also make it stricter. If one expects to be treated like an adult, one must act like an adult.

If you go to class, know what to study for, you will pass.

If you don't know what to study for, and don't go to class, you will not pass.

Thank you,
Mike Wilson

Birmingham band hits the big time with debut

"Growing up in the South has had an absolute effect on our music."

Damon Johnson, lead singer and guitarist of the Birmingham-based rock band Brother Cane, makes no apologies for the band's Southern influences. "When we were kids, we got a lot of gospel music, a lot of country music and a lot of blues." And the variety of the South's influences make the up-and-coming Brother Cane a well-rounded band, both in sound and style.

Brother Cane played Brother's Bar in Jacksonville last Wednesday. The show was part of a "sneak-preview" tour promoting their debut album on Virgin Records, scheduled for a May 18 release.

All members of the band live in Birmingham, and all grew up in different towns across the state. Drummer Scott Collier grew up in Piedmont. Johnson was raised on a farm just outside of a small town called Geraldine. Bass player Glenn Maxey is from Huntsville, and guitarist Roman Glick has lived in Birmingham for the past 10 to 12 years.

So how do a bunch of 'Bama boys get signed to a label like Virgin? "We went through pretty much the same process that a lot of other bands do," says Johnson. "We recorded a demo tape and a pretty high profile attorney we knew out of New York really liked the tape and...started shopping it to all the companies."

The band played for anywhere from 10 to 12 labels before Virgin "bellied up to the bar and pulled out their checkbook," says Johnson.

"They liked the sound that we had and the vibe that we had," Johnson says. "Even more importantly, they could tell we were just wanting to work hard. I think a lot of bands, once they get a record deal, think 'Cool, we've made it. Now we're going to be rock stars.' Believe me," he laughed, "getting the deal is the first thing and then the hard work starts." And so it did. The album was recorded in three different studios over eight weeks. The bulk of the recording was done in Los Angeles, but the band came back to Birmingham to lay down background vocals and keyboard parts.

Everyone who played on the album lives in Birmingham, including keyboardist Chuck Leavell, who was a member of the Allman Brothers and also toured with the Rolling Stones and Eric Clapton. Another Birmingham musician is the blues harp player Copper Price, whose playing accentuates the album's first cut, "Got No Shame" - most likely the first single from the album.

Johnson says the band is happy with the label's choice for the first single because it "establishes more of our harder edge" and lends more of a live feel. "I think that song is pretty indicative of how we'd like to present ourselves to the public," he says.

If all goes as planned, the band will start shooting a video in April, but Brother Cane isn't fretting about image.

"I think when it's all said and done, the most important thing is the songs, and that's what we put our emphasis on," Johnson says. "This is our first record, and we've got a long way to go and a lot of growing to do, but we feel like this is a good place to start."

Sam Raimi's 'Army of Darkness' can't stand ground

Raimi's films feature bizarre effects

Sam Raimi is no stranger to special effects. His new film, "Army of Darkness," relies almost solely on special effects.

Raimi's previous two prequels to "Darkness," the "Evil Dead" films, are cult classics. Both are non-stop strings of gory and bizarre special effects. Quick editing and sweeping camerawork also adds to the effect.

Raimi did attempt a "serious" film with 1990's "Darkman," starring Liam Neeson. An "Elephant Man"-type plot, though, serious as it is, still leaves room for some jaw-dropping special effects.

-- Jamie Cole
Features Editor

Raimi's "Evil Dead" series is chock full of non-stop action and gore: a cult film lover's delight.

Where else can you watch an army of stop-motion skeletons marching across the screen?

Not since special effects master Ray Harryhausen's brilliant effects in "Jason and the Argonauts" has such an astonishing collection of special effects been corralled for our viewing pleasure.

Too bad they're held together by nothing more than a bland string of horror film cliches.

In director Sam Raimi's "Army of Darkness," a sequel to his "Evil Dead" films, star Bruce Campbell returns as Ash, the sole survivor of the previous two films. In this latest, and probably last, "Evil Dead" installment, he is transported back in time to the Middle Ages. Once there, he must recover the Book of the Dead, that seemingly indestructible entity that he has been chasing since the first "Evil Dead." This way, the local Wiseman (Ian Abercrombie in an innocuous performance) can send him home and these medieval people can get on with their medieval lives. There's only one problem: when retrieving the Book, Ash forgets to recite the Latin phrase the Wiseman taught him and, in doing so, wakes a multitude of dead, decomposed guys that decide to form an army behind Ash's evil twin in order to retrieve the book.

If at this point you're saying, "Huh?" that's fine; so was I. The contrived screenplay by Sam and Ivan Raimi is merely a stage set for the astounding special effects in the film (this is nothing new; see story at left).

I would talk about performances, but there's not really a performance in the film. Bruce Campbell (who also sits in as a co-producer) tries to pull off the Schwarzenegger-like one-liners with a touch of wit, but ends up being humorless and annoying. Embeth Davidtz, who plays Campbell's love interest, does the same. After being converted to the "other side" by Ash's evil twin, she looks into the camera and

Tracy Casagrande

To overcome challenges in life, people must set goals which will allow them to excel, especially in college. That's the philosophy of JSU's Tracy Casagrande, a senior majoring in social work and sociology.

Casagrande received the Gwen G. Mulderscholarship, which was sponsored by the Department of Sociology. The scholarship targets students who possess leadership and academic excellence within their major.

"It's an honor," says Casagrande. "The woman the scholarship was named after used to be a professor here, and she was an outstanding leader in her field."

Although Casagrande plans to graduate in August 1993 with a Bachelor's degree in sociology and in December with a Bachelor's in social work, she plans to pursue a master's degree in social work before her school days are done. Casagrande said she would like to work in a children's hospital and is especially partial to terminally ill patients.

"This has been a very rewarding major for me," she said. "I have had a lot of volunteer work and even more practical experience."

Casagrande has had a lot of inspiration driving her success. "My mother has been a very important driving force in my education," she says. "This entire department is very close-knit, and the professors are very dedicated."

Casagrande is a member of several different student organizations, including Zeta Tau Alpha and Omicron Delta Kappa Leadership Honor Society. She is also a recipient of the JSU Leadership Scholarship and a Dean's List Honoree.

Brother Cane reflects its influences

Will Chandler
Music writer

Led Zeppelin. Thin Lizzy. The Allman Brothers. Lynyrd Skynyrd. Ghost-voices from the past that shine through in the music of Brother Cane.

Brother Cane's debut album, due out May 18 on Virgin Records, successfully fuses the country, gospel and blues from their childhoods with the southern rock and mainstream rock of more recent times.

The album was co-produced by Jim Mitchell, who engineered "Use Your Illusion I and II" by Guns N' Roses, and the album echoes it in places.

The first song, "Got No Shame," explodes with a blues furor accentuated by blues harp player Copper Price.

The second song, "Hard Act To Follow," follows up with an equally memorable tune.

Other pieces, such as "Woman" and "Don't Turn Your Back On Me," leave you with a moving impression of another's soul.

Lead singer/guitarist Damon Johnson did the majority of the writing on the album, but co-wrote several songs with guitarist Roman Glick. The third track, "How Long," was a group effort.

Johnson said that everyone in the band contributes his own style to the songs, and you can feel it in their live show.

"Sometimes you're playing these same songs five or six times a week. It's a lot easier when you feel it's a part of your own creative expression."

Although diverse, the album has a definite cohesiveness. Johnson attributed this to the fact that only the four band members and a few friends played on the album.

Over all it is focused, an earthy album by a band whose roots tap the very soul of rock n' roll.

Raimi

says, "I may be bad, but I feel good."

There are a few funny parodies, though. Raimi pokes fun at "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" with his middle ages motif and an archery segment. He also takes a shot at the "Terminator" films in a sequence in which Ash creates a new hand for himself (he had lost it in a previous film and replaced it with a chainsaw).

Some of the battle scenes, in which villagers rally around Ash to fight the army of skeletons, are perversely fascinating. But nothing in the film rivals the all-out wackiness of the first two "Dead" films.

I guess you could say that as movies go, this is bare bones filmmaking.

Gamecocks in GSC tournament field

From staff reports

JSU, by virtue of its third-place finish, will play Livingston in the opening round of the Gulf South Conference tournament to be played this weekend in Cleveland, Miss. at Delta State.

The host school will play Mississippi College in the first round at 7:30 p.m. Friday. JSU and Livingston tip off at 5:30.

The Gamecocks and Tigers have split their two games this season. JSU won 95-78 in Jacksonville on Jan. 9. Livingston beat the Gamecocks 101-86 Monday in the season finale.

The two winners play at 7:30 pm Saturday for the championship and the GSC's automatic berth in the NCAA playoffs.

Last year, the tournament was held at Jacksonville and the Gamecocks won the title by beating North Alabama and Mississippi College.

JSU has won the conference tournament four times, more than any other school. Delta State has won it only once, in 1986. Livingston won the tournament in 1982.

Mississippi College has never won the tournament, but did win a conference regular season title in 1978.

Delta State was a unanimous preseason pick to win the conference. The Statesmen finished league play with a 9-3 record. Livingston was 8-4, while JSU and Mississippi College both finished 6-6.

This is the Gamecocks final appearance in the GSC tournament. JSU begins a two-year compliance period next year in an attempt to move to Division I.

Gamecock senior point guard Fred Mosley will lead JSU in the Gulf South Conference tournament this weekend at Delta State.

JSU beats MC in thriller

From staff reports

JSU was in need of another win in the Gulf South Conference if it intended on qualifying for the conference tournament heading into last week's games at Mississippi College and Livingston.

But Saturday night the Gamecocks came up with a clutch 73-72 win over the Choctaws in Clinton, Miss.

The game was not without its tense moments, especially the final seconds. Mississippi College's Roderick Proctor hit a 3-pointer to give the Choctaws a one-point lead. JSU's Jeff Terry answered that with a two-point goal with under 5 seconds to play to give JSU a 73-72 lead.

Mississippi College's 6-foot 6-inch center Tracy Mabry then took the inbounds pass and launched a 35-foot prayer that was very nearly answered. The shot went in, then out, where teammate Owen Miller was waiting to tip it in.

Miller's tip was a split-second too late and JSU had its spot in the tournament.

Anthony Kingston led the Gamecocks with 29 points. Terry added 26 points. Kingston also had a team-high 13 rebounds.

Livingston's 3-point barrage was too much for the Gamecocks to overcome as the Tigers won 101-86. The Tigers hit 16 of 28 shots behind the arc to JSU's 7 of 15.

JSU had kept it close for much of the game — Livingston led 51-48 at the half — but a cold spell midway through the second half spelled doom for the Gamecocks.

Kingston again led JSU with 25 points. Terry pumped in 19 and Tracy Posey had 17.

Gamecocks stay hot; winning streak at three

Tim Hathcock

A sterling pitching performance and a strong hitting display carried the JSU baseball team to a pair of wins last week over Cumberland and Shorter. JSU is now 4-1 on the season.

Against Cumberland on Saturday, starter Tony Shaver and reliever Brad Angel combined to hold Cumberland to just three runs and 10 hits as JSU won 7-3. The three runs were a season low for JSU's opponents.

Shaver and Angel combined for a win for the second time this season in Friday's game with Cumberland. The duo beat Faulkner 15-4 in the opening game of the season. Faulkner gave the two a bit more difficulty than did the Bulldogs.

Shaver said the weather was a factor in first game. "The mound was wet," he said of the first game. "I was a little bit nervous. It was my first Division II game." Angel felt the butterflies in the opener as well. "I had about 20 family members in the stands." Angel is from Jacksonville.

There were no first game jitters against Cumberland for the two, although the weather still played a role. The game was played in bone-chilling cold. "It's hard to get a lot done when it's 30 degrees two days in a row and it rained the two days before that," said JSU head coach Rudy Abbott.

Shaver starting and Angel relieving is a familiar scenario for the two Gamecock hurlers. Both came from Jeff Davis

Community College in Brewton. "It's just like in junior college," said Angel. "He starts and I finish."

Angel gave credit to his catcher David Deerman, another local product. "He's been keeping us on track. Deerman's one of the keys." Deerman has started every game behind the plate and has caught every inning but one.

The yeoman's duty behind the plate may have affected Deerman's hitting, but he finally broke out of a season-long slump in Saturday's game with Shorter. Deerman hit his first home run of the season in a six-run late-inning rally that carried the Gamecocks to a 13-10 win over Shorter.

Deerman had plenty of company with the long ball.

After JSU had fallen behind 4-0 in the first inning, the Gamecocks went to work in the bottom half. Designated hitter John Stratton hit a home run with two outs that started a home run barrage.

Ray Ascenbach followed with a walk and then Robby Beaver, Anthony Richardson and Mike Howell homered on consecutive at-bats to give JSU a 5-4 lead.

Jason Troup homered in the second inning. The Gamecocks now have 17 home runs on the year. Stratton, who homered against Cumberland as well, now has five homers and 16 RBI. He has hit at least one home run in the last four games.

Joe Burns picked up the win in relief in the GSC standings JSU got it done against Mississippi College. The Choctaws were in a similar situation as JSU.

The Gamecocks needed a win in their final two games to secure a spot in this weekend's Gulf South Conference tournament.

Which would normally be no problem. But JSU had not won a road game all year long in conference play.

And, the two teams it was playing, Mississippi College and Livingston, were ahead of the Gamecocks

Win and be in the tourney, lose and face possible elimination.

With all the odds against them, JSU still managed to pull out the win.

The win, coupled with North Alabama's win over Valdosta State, brings another gem to the Gamecocks.

JSU women beat MC

From staff reports

The JSU Lady Gamecocks, having already wrapped up second place in the Gulf South Conference, hit the road last week to finish regular season conference play against Mississippi College and Livingston.

The Lady Gamecocks pulled out a thrilling win against the Lady Choctaws by a score of 55-54.

Tracy Linton led JSU with 19 points and 12 rebounds. Shaun Thomas had 12 and Simmons 11.

Livingston beat up on the Lady Gamecocks in Livingston on Monday by a score of 91-70.

Linton again paced JSU with 19 points and 18 rebounds. Simmons scored 13 points.

JSU hosts Troy State tonight at 7 pm at Pete Mathews Coliseum. JSU plays Livingston in the GSC tournament March 5 at Delta State.

Rain forces tennis teams indoors; men lose, women win

From staff reports

Instead of the rain dampening the spirits of the JSU tennis team Saturday, it simply trucked on over to the Anniston Country Club to play its match with Troy State on its indoor courts.

The men's team wishes it hadn't. The Troy State men defeated JSU 8-1.

The JSU women, however, were much more successful, winning 9-0.

Tracy Wilder won 6-1, 6-0, Maria

Zavalawon 6-1, 6-2, Caroline Dunn 6-0, 6-1, Lara Ashley-Root 6-1, 6-0 and Wendy Weseman 6-1, 6-0

The doubles team of Dunn and Root triumphed 6-2, 6-0 and Helm and Tina Shamblin won their doubles match 6-0, 6-1.

JSU's women are now 1-1.

Andrew Jackson and Lars Van Gelder won 6-3, 6-7, 6-3 in doubles for JSU's lone victory.

The Gamecock men were ranked No. 12 and Troy State No. 10 entering the match. The JSU men are also 1-1.

Baseball

against Shorter. Dave Spence came on for the save, striking out the Hawks' Bryan Hamrick on a 3-2 pitch with the bases loaded. "Burns gave us three of four real good innings," said Abbott. "He pitched well. Spence came in and did a good job."

First baseman Jason Troup said the comeback was not unexpected. "We knew we had to come back in and pick everybody up," he said. "We swung the bats well and got some clutch hits."

"You have to get excited about a team that can be behind four runs in the first inning and come back," said Abbott.

"We've got the hitters," said Deerman. "It doesn't matter how far behind we are, we can come back."

JSU's games with Talladega and Faulkner were rained out and were to be rescheduled if possible. The Gamecocks travelled to Auburn Wednesday for the first road game of the year.

JSU is back home today against Siena Heights for a doubleheader beginning at 1 pm. Former Gulf South Conference foe Troy State visits for a doubleheader at noon Sunday.

From page 13

JSU will face Livingston in the first round, instead of host Delta State.

The Gamecocks split with Livingston, but lost in two blowouts to the Statesmen.

That's the good news. The bad news is the Gamecocks final regular season game was a 15-point loss to Livingston.

But, anything can happen on a neutral court.

Also, the last Livingston game was tight until a JSU drought midway through the second half gave the Tigers a lead which they never lost.

JSU won't have to contend with the Tigers 3-point shots like they did in Livingston.

Look for the Gamecocks to advance to the finals of the conference tournament with a win by a score of...

JSU 95, Livingston 90.

Delta State is the host of the GSC tournament by virtue of its first-place finish in the regular season.

The Statesmen proved it was no fluke as they finished strong. Delta State should send the Choctaws whimpering back to Clinton with a win of...

Delta State 92, MC 79.

Can the Gamecocks do something they haven't done all year? That is, beat Delta State.

The Statesmen have too much size and too much talent to not win the conference tournament played in their own gym.

Look for JSU to keep the game close, though, with the fortitude it showed at Mississippi College. But, let's take the Statesmen to end JSU's season by a score of...
